We have the startling statement made by Edward Atkinson, the noted statistician, that the product of the hen in the United States is of greater value than all the iron products or the silver mines of the United States. It has been stated that the farmer's gold mine was in the soil of his farm, and again, since fertilizing has become more common, it has been located in the barnyard in the manure pile, but since a proper estimate has been made of the value of the unpretending chicken, it has been discovered that i is the hen that lays the golden egg, and that she continues laying during the whole year if she has a reasonable amoun of care and is well fed. It will be worth the while of some farmers whose wive are sometimes in need of gold to remember that they have a small gold mine in their chicken house, and that if the chickens are fed with care they will scratch out the grains or the yellow metal so fast as to make it profitable to pick it up.

Hurrah for Miss Smith.

Miss Libbie Smith, of East Norwalk, Connecticut, was to have been married to Elmer Merrill, a merchant of Staten Island, New York, on Christmas night, but Miss Libbie Smith, of East Norwalk land, New York, on Christmas night, but at her own instance the marriage was indefinitely postponed. In a letter to the New York World, the Rev. Frank E. Robbins, Miss Smith's pastor, explains why it was that the young lady declined to allow the marriage to proceed, as fol-

"Miss Smith is a diligent Bible student and withal a most devout young Christian woman, and having falled in her tian woman, and having falled in her and mangled, and from these his immortant earnest and constant endeavors to win this young man to accept Christ as his tal spirit took its upward flight. Left with two sons and two daughters, all with two sons and two daughters, all Apostle Paul's stern warning to Christians, 'Be not unequally yoked with un-believers,' was accepted by her in all se-riousness. The question arcse: If she did not possess sufficient influence over this young man to effect his reformation be-fore, would she after marriage? Common sense answered no. There was no vis-ion, no hysterics, nothing but good, oldfashioned common sense about it all."

Miss Smith is evidently made of the right kind of stuff, and will doubtless be a great deal happier without Mr. Merrill than she would have been with him. There would probably not be so much marrying if Miss Libbie's policy should be generally agreed upon, but there would unquestionably be more happiness. Marrying wicked young men to reform them is a snare and a delusion. There has been too much of this sort of thing all over the country. It is the source of most domestic woe, and comes out in nearly every divorce trial. Nobody ever heard of a young man marry ing a bad young woman to reform herwhy should not the women have as much sense as the men? Hurrah for Miss Libbie Smith .- News

The Annual Hop of the Chiquola German Club.

The dance which ushered out the old year in this city was an elegant clinax to a successful social season. The Chiquola German Club, in this latest venture, undoubtedly surpassed all similar efforts in its previous history. More than one hundred persons were in active attendance, and during the progress of the function the spacious dining room of the Chiquola Hotel was a scene of typical new year brightness and beauty. Lovely faces, handsome gowns and a conspicuously pervading animation appealed perfectly to the pleasure-loving and artistic Music was furnished by Bearden's Orchestra of seven pieces from Augusta, and it is but merited praise to say that no finer dance music has ever delighted this section. Perfect time and harmony characterized the work of this aggregation, and in the strains of every air could be found an inspiration and a revelation.

The dance was opened at 9:30 o'clock with the first feature of the arranged programme, a grand march, gracefully led by Mr. George W. Evans, the President of the Club, with Miss Maggie Evans. The order of dances was then observed as follows: Waltz, two-step, quadrille, polka, waltz, shottische, lancers, two-step, waltz, quadrille, waltz,

We feel that we can expect this. The signs point to it and conditions invite it. There are not half a dozen papers in the

Flanagan seems to have been in love with Leila Allen, the 11-year-old granddaughter of Dixon Allen. The old cou-ple's married son, G. W. Allen, and his wife and two children lived with them in a neat little cottage, four miles from the city limits. Flansgan had been poarding with them for six months. His actions to-day were not quite natural, but he did not cause any alarm. It was noticed though that he was anxious to get the members of the family to leave the house. Late in the afternoon he returned, and when supper was announced he ate with the family. When he had finished he asked Mrs. G. W. Allen to give him a drink of water. She left the room to get it. Her husband was r. Flanagan went to his own room, and through a portiere close to the son's head struck him in the back of the head. He fell to the floor. Flanagan stepped over his body and knocked the lamp from the table with a wave of his pistol. This left the room in darkness. Old Mrs. Allen, Miss Slack, who was a sister of the and fired. Allen dodged, and the ball struck him in the back of the head. He Miss Slack, who was a sister of the younger Mrs. Allen, and the children ran into a room in terror. Flanagan clubbed the eider Allen with his pistol and killed him with a few blows. Then his hands in establishing it. Grandmother Allen was shot through the body twice and killed. Miss Slack was shot through the back and mortally wounded. At this moment the daughter in law, who had gone for the mortally wounded. At this moment the daughter-in-law, who had gone for the water, returned and rushed into the room, where she heard the firing. She found that Flanagan was trying to kill Leila, her daughter. She struck up the pistol, and then clinched with the mur-derer. He struggled, and she held to him until he had dragged her out of There she, by almost superhuman trength, threw him to the ground. Flanagan fought like a madman and tried nis best to shoot her. She succeeded in preventing him from firing for a minute or two. By this time her husband had ecovered consciousness, and ran out to als wife's rescue. Together they were able to hold Flanagan and disarm rim. Mrs. Allen then called help and when neighbors arrived Allen was holding the murderer on the ground. Flanagan was bound with ropes and held until Sheriff Austin, of DeKalb County, arrived. In he meantime a large crowd had assembled and they talked of lynching Flana-gan. The Sheriff did not wait to give them an opportunity, but immediately hurried the prisoner off and brought him into the city, where he was placed in the county jail. Flanagan would not talk, except to say that he was drunk. A bottle of whiskey and $535 were found in his pockets. He had evidently prepared himself for flight. Flanagan came to Atlanta from Louisville, Ky, last spring. He is a carpenter by trade, but of late had some connection with the Standard Cil Miss Slack, who died at midnight, was from Birmingham. She was to be married next week. G W. Allen, who was not dangerously wounded, is a contrac-tor. He thinks that Flanagan was in love with his daughter Leila, and wanted to kill the whole family because he could not marry the child. Flanagan retained Judge Hillyer to defend him. The attorney had an inter-

SAVANNAH, GA., December 31.—A special to the Morning News, from Waycross, Ga. says: Charles W. Wilson was killed this morning by Warren H. Williams, and the latter has, been adadged guilty of murder by the coroner's The tragedy occurred this morning at 8 o'clock in the lobby of the Southern Ho-tel. Four shots were fired, two by Wil-son and two by Williams. Mr. Williams surrendered to the sheriff, and made a statement to the coroner's jury.

Mr. Williams is manager of the hotel, having come here two months ago from Gainesville, Ga., where he was manager of the Arlington House. He was graduated at Emory College, and is proprietor of the Hartwell, Ga., Sun. His health is delicate. He is apparently 30 years old. He is well connected in North Carolina. Mrs. Williams, his young wife, is pretty and accomplished. She arrived only a week or two ago from Atlanta, where she was ill two months from typhoid fever in St. Joseph's Infirmary. Mrs. Williams has a beautiful head of black

Mr. Wilson was about 25, and a hand-some man. His father, Col. I. G. Wil-son, resides at Demopolis, Alabama, and will arrive in the morning and take his son's remains home for interment. Mr. Wilson was a nephew of J. C. S. Timber-lake, of the Hotel St. Simon's, of St. Simon's Island, and was prominent in so-ciety in Georgia and Alabama. He was popular, and a Chesterfield in manners. Mr. Wilson became a guest of the hotel three days ago and paid marked attention to the pretty wife of his host, Mrs. Williams. Mr. Williams has not been remanded to jail, but is in custody.

Williams made a statement before the coroner's jury to-day, in which he said that Wilson had persisted in forcing his attentions on Mrs. Williams, and last night insulted her. Mr. and Mrs. Wil-liams decided that Wilson should be asked this morning to leave the hotel. Williams says he approached Wilson for this purpose, and that the latter was in-solent and defiant. His conduct showed that he knew before Williams spoke that he saw that Williams had been informed of the insult offered Mrs. Williams. Williams says that after a few words Wilson drew a pistol, intending to kill nim. Williams thereupon hurriedly drew his own weapon and the fusilade followed. Williams adds that when he approached Wilson his only object was to ask him to leave the hotel, and that he had no idea of bringing on a personal en-

- According to a report of the Horseshoers' Protective Association, the horse is not only holding his own against the bicycle, but there is actually an increase in the number of horses now in this country. It says there are in Ohio 19,000 more horses than there were one year ago, 17,000 more in Michigan, 2,500 more in New York and a corresponding inrease in other States. The statistician of the association explains this by saying that bicycles are used chiefly by people who never did and never would own a orse, and that while an occasional man may sell his horse and adopt the bicycle, the change is only temporary.
